Subject: What to do in summer-break?

Dear Cousin,

I hope this email finds you well; I am sure you are beyond excited that your school-life is finally coming to an end. It's definitely very exciting and scary, but, I am sure you will handle it very well! You are probably quite confused at what to do in your summer break, aren't you? Well I hope I can shed some light by sharing my opinion. As you may already know, some people are of the view that this is a crucial opportunity to prepare for one's future and believe simply that travelling is a waste of time and resources, and this time is much better spent doing other important things, whilst others insist that travelling to as many places as possible will be the most memorable fun and happy time of your life!

Many people include contend that travelling is simply too expensive and the flights, hotels and ~~trips~~ <sup>experiences</sup> ~~cost~~ <sup>are</sup> simply too much, whilst that money is better spent on other education, a business or even a car! However, you have to be smart whilst travelling, there are many websites that offer deals, bundles and discounts making travel no more a burden on

Moreover, few people believe that travelling is better done when one's <sup>oneself</sup> ~~himself~~ <sup>independently</sup> ~~and~~ <sup>responsibly</sup> supporting <sup>himself</sup> ~~on~~ his own. Unfortunately, many individuals, like my own father for instance, simply can't find the time to do so as he is too involved with his job. Won't you <sup>v</sup> regret not enjoying ~~the time~~ <sup>your life</sup> when you had the time? Additionally, some assert that utilizing this time on getting <sup>v</sup> work experience at places

But, they do not know that travelling too can have a likely effect when you <sup>v</sup> interact with different <sup>and</sup> norms, cultures, <sup>and</sup> ~~food~~ <sup>people of different personalities</sup> and more; they will not only teach you skills

I cried silent tears of regret and pain. I had lost control over my body. It felt as if at one moment, my body was on fire with ~~no~~ and being stabbed whilst at the other, ~~my body~~ it was numb and not listening to my brain. As I layed there, surrounded by nothing but a few million scanners and hospital monitors, which beeped as if there was no tomorrow, I could only think about how wrong I had been. Suddenly, a moist breeze which smelled like wet ~~street~~ mud blew over my face, <sup>(from my closed window)</sup> immediately bringing me back to the day which put me into the hospital in the first place.

I knew I had to overcome my fear if I was going to win, is what I had always lived by. Every decision, every hurdle or any and every moment felt easy and do-able when I followed this motto. This ideology had ended me up in my dream job, <sup>profession</sup> jockey racing.

It was the day of the final championship, it would decide
